

LIFE AFTER DEATH

by ED JOZSA

On May 30, 2017 my life changed forever when I was involved in a devastating head-on auto collision. I was pinned in the car for hours and suffered two collapsed lungs, damage to many internal organs, bones, muscles, ligaments, and tendons, throughout my body.

I never lost consciousness and I fought suffocation and blinding pain for hours while trapped in the car. During the following weeks spent in the hospital with constant, unimaginable, unabating, pain, I had a flashback of an experience I had lived through after the wreck. Things became crystal clear. I was no longer on this earth, but somewhere in God's realm. There I felt hopelessly alone. Due to my choices, God was absent. I understood that in our earthly lives, God holds our souls in His hand our whole life. I hadn't realized God had been holding my soul until I left this world and His touch was gone. It was horrifying.

The horror of losing God's presence was overwhelming and indescribable. A terror unlike any I'd ever felt in my earthly life; an ancient, horrifying, burning deep within my soul. I lived within timeless torture. I cannot say if I was there for ten seconds or ten years. After much struggle, I accepted it as what I deserved because of the choices I made in my earthly life.

The moment I made this acceptance, I was free and back in my hospital bed. One profound thing had changed: I could now feel God's hand holding my soul. I realized that I always could, but I didn't realize it until His touch had left me.

The next day, I closed my eyes to try and sleep. Suddenly I was gone. I was not asleep. I was somewhere else. I could see deep and far ahead. I was looking into an abyss. Below me were lying entangled together demons. They were covered in blood, wailing, moaning, and making horrifying sounds. I was back in the soul-crushing place with the fear I'd thought had passed.

I prayed to Jesus. I asked Him to send the Holy Spirit to take these images away. I talked to Jesus about His Passion. I told Him I now understood how much He endured for us. I told Him I now understood the extent of His pain. When I finished, I told Jesus I was going to close my eyes and try to rest.

To summarize so much that happened in such a little period of time, I was enveloped by a brilliant sphere of light. I could feel the love and power of God touching me like one feels the sun's heat on our skin. Scripture verses flooded me, and the Lord's power overcame me. I was in a place I never wanted to leave. A spire of light stretched out toward my chest where my soul resides. When it touched my soul, I felt everything. I felt my soul pouring into Him, and at the same time, I felt Him pouring into my soul. There are no words or language to adequately describe the experience. I instantly felt love, compassion, mercy, joy, hope, ecstasy—every good feeling. And I remember the only thing I could say was, "MORE."

To say this vision changed me is an understatement. I now have a mission to share the message that God is real. He is tangible, and He holds all of our souls. He touches us physically every day. He wants us to share Him with others, and to bring His message of salvation to the whole world.
